ENTERIC FEVER

Before World War I, enteric fever, or typhoid fever, was the scourge of armies, and in the Anglo-Boer War killed more soldiers than enemy action. It is caused by a bacteria entering the body via contaminated food or water. Early symptoms include high fever, headaches and lassitude. Follicles along the intestinal walls later become inflamed, often leading to perforation and haemorrhaging. Other complications include gall bladder, pneumonia or heart failure.
At the time of the Boer War, there were no antibiotic remedies for the disease.

RIVERTON SOUTH AFRICAN WAR MEMORIAL

The South African War memorial on Palmerston Street in Riverton commemorates Troopers' D.F McIntosh (Fairfax), F.H Goode (Riverton), Seth Kye (Mossburn), D.B Ferrar (Otautau) and Alexander Scott (Clifton) of the Wallace District. The stone obelisk is further inscribed with 'The path to duty was the way to glory,' and was unveiled by J.C Thomson M.H.R. It cost £105. The money being raised by local subscription and the Riverton Patriotic Committee.
The memorial was designed and erected by the Italian stonemason Carlo Bergamini who was also responsible for South African War memorials at Palmerston, Waimate, Oamaru and Dunedin.
